OTTAWA, April 8, 2015 /CNW/ - Until August 30, the National Gallery of Canada (NGC) presents a selection of significant works by the winners of the 2015 Governor General's Awards in Visual and Media Arts. The exhibition is organized by the NGC in collaboration with the Canada Council for the Arts.

The exhibition curator, Rhiannon Vogl, NGC associate curator of contemporary art, has selected and gathered key works by visual artists Robert Houle and Micah Lexier, both from Toronto; media artist Rafael Lozano-Hemmer, from Montreal; painter Sandra Meigs, from Victoria; visual artist, writer and composer Rober Racine, from Montreal; new media artist Reva Stone, from Winnipeg, and jewellery artist Paul McClure, from Toronto, recipient of the Saidye Bronfman Award. Montreal-based curator Louise Déry's outstanding contribution will also be highlighted. The exhibition will include both loans from the laureates and works from the private and public collections, including from the national collection.

"We're excited about this collaboration with the Canada Council for the Arts, which aims to show our visitors the exceptional talents and careers of this year's winners," said NGC Director and CEO, Marc Mayer.

To learn more about the winners, read their profile and watch their respective video portraits on Canada Council for the Arts' website.

The Awards, funded and administered by the Canada Council for the Arts. They recognize distinguished career achievements in the visual and media arts by Canadian artists and arts professionals or volunteers.
